FURNISHINGS FOR COMMERCIAL CLUB

Committee Lets Contract for Captain E. B. Wilder Passes New Home Insuring Artistic Result.

SCHEME OF DECORATIONS VIRGINIA

SIGNS SELECTED.

After weeks, the daily hours of which have been spent in the arduous work of choosing and selecting, the committee upon which devolved the work of providing interior decorations and furnishings for the new Commercial club building, yesterday reached their decision and awarded the contract which will provide for the main furnishing of the club's home. tative of the company. In the awarding of the contract the idea of having the decorations and furnishings of a quality and design in thorough keeping with the building itself was a factor, in the mind of the committee, as important as the cost itself. The general scheme of the interior decoration follows the suggestion of the architect, and the idea follows that of the Spanish renaissance. The rotunda, on the first or main floor, will have the Spanish effect in its mosaic work, with the wall decorations and colorings in an education and became a civil engisoft Pompelian green and old reds. The furniture will be of special design and out the route of the old Michigan Cenprelate style, upholstered in appropriate colorings of silk brocade and antique velvet. The portieres will be paneled, picturing scenes of the siege of Troy, and with the color effect of old greens, reds and browns. The fixtures will all be of Pompeiian green metal.

Lounging Room Design.

The lounging room will be furnished in mahogany woodwork of a soft color, and the walls covered with fabric. The rich in their Oriental blending of color, in the development of the west. will cover the floor and the furniture, which will be upholstered in the finest grades of leather and velvets, will be of the character to tempt the man seeking rest. The lighting fixtures of this room will be of Butler silver,

The buffet will have a brick wainscot-The buffet will have a brick wainscot-ing, with the space above treated in oil of Dame Fortune's ward birests decorations. With some appropriateness, a huge painting will adorn the walls, depicting the "Indian's First Firewater." The hangings of this room will be of craftsman's cloth, with the club's monogram embroidered on each

On the same floor will be the north and south halls, the business office and the secretary's office. All of these will be appropriately furnished in handsome

On the second floor the principal room will be the banquet hall, two stories in height. This spacious room will be one of the most handsome in the structure. Its walls will be in the nature of paneled reproductions with the gorgeously rich French velvet of dark rose effect. The hangings here will be of a gray green silk and velvet, with gold embroidery. The lofty ceiling will be tinted to an azure blue in a gold setting. Beautiful in its simple grandeur will be this room, the effect being heightened with imported velvet rugs and furniture of a gray enamel in harmony with the woodwork of the hall.

Governors' Dining Room.

The board of governors' dining room will be decorated with walls covered in gold leaf and glazed to an antique finish. The tapestries will be of silk and linen materials, and the lighting fixtures of oxidized silver.

The third floor, styled the mezzanine floor, will be the attraction for the women, and especial care and attention has been given to its furnishing and decoration. The ladies' parlor will be treated in the Adams period style. The color scheme will be Nile green, with the walls draped in a pure silk fabric. The hangings will be of silk with embroideries of satin, and the furniture of Circassian walnut and golden effect, upholstered in appropriate brocade effects The chandeliers and lighting brackets will be of matt gold.

The dining room for women will be of the Dutch style, the walls covered with imported figured linen of a Portumoreton Frewen, who will speak at the commercial club today on "Finance and oriental Trade," arrived in Salt Lake last on this floor there will also be four private dining rooms devoted to the use of the women visitors of the club, and the arrangement of the mezzanine floor is such that all interior windows of the rooms given over to the women look down into the main banquet hall.

IN REAL ESTATE

Invested in Salt Lake City by Accident and Then by Design.

PROPERTY VALUES GO UP

STATE STREET CORNERS ARE PRINCIPAL LOTS RETAINED.

How Henry Phipps of Pittsburg made his first investment in Salt Lake real estate and then held to it as a sound security, adding to his holdings from time to time, in a general way throws an interesting sidelight upon the recent movement in realty in the neighbor-hood of some of his Salt Lake holdings. Phipps seems to have more money than he can utilize, and that's why he would not sell the Halls notel corner at Third South and State streets. He can get enough of a rental to pay good interest on his investment. He took the view that if he sold the property he wouldn't know what to do with the money. For a man to have so much wealth that he wouldn't know what to do with money if some one handed it to him is regarded as positively sinful in all well regulated circles of high or ow finance.

Fifteen years ago there was a mort-Fifteen years ago there was a mort-gage on the property at the northwest corner of Second South and State streets, and Phipps was induced by Salt Lake capitalists to take it up. Later, he became the owner of the property and still holds it, refusing to sell. This was his first dip into Salt Lake real estate, and the steel magnate liked the looks of the city as a place for invest-ment. He later acquired nearly all of ment. He later acquired nearly all of the property on the north side of Sec-ond South street, between State and Commercial street, relinquishing some of it to Jacob Moritz. He released all of the property except the corner, but at the same time he acquired other pieces, and from his faraway Pittsburg home he accumulated more than a passing interest in the advancement of Salt Lake.

Mortgage on Hotel.

Phipps took up a mortgage of $100,-000 on the Halls hotel, which was then owned by Ricketts. Ricketts sold out, getting about $40,000 for his interest and a few months later he died. A similar transaction threw the Maniton hotel into the hands of Phipps, although no one died following the sale. Other choice locations came into his possession, and he came to be regarded as a factor in the advancement of the city A neat fortune was tied up in securi-

ANOTHER OLD LANDMARK

Adobe House in State Street Is the Last to Withstand

Progress In the rejuvenation of State street, nother landmark is expected to pass

This property is about the only piece between Second and Third South on State that has not undergone a change since its original improvement in the early days, and the owners have withdrawn it from the market with the intention of building.

tention of building.

The property is owned by a Los Angeles investor, and controlled by William G. Bradshaw, a broker of that city, who has already invested money in State street property. The owners asked $40,000 for the property until this summer, when that figure was withdrawn. Tuttle Brothers had one or two buyers who were willing to pay more and offered the owners much in excess of $40,000. However, the most excess of $40,000. However, the most flattering offer has been refused, and it is understood that the property has been withdrawn from the market, en-expanded business district. It has a frontage of 50% feet and a depth of 99 feet. It is ideally located where almost any kind of a substantial build-ing would be a paying investment and it is believed that the Los Angeles owners have seen the advantage of the place and will build instead of selling. $21.75 for $35.00 and $30.00
